CONDITIONS OF SALE

1. The highest Bidder to be the Buyer, and if any dispute arise between two or more Bidders, the Lot so in dispute shall be immediately put up again and re-sold.

2. The Auctioneer reserves the right to reject any bid which is merely a nominal or fractional advance, and therefore, in his judgment, likely to affect the Sale injuriously.

3. The Purchasers to give their names and addresses, and to pay down a cash deposit, or the whole of the Purchase-money, if required, in default of which the Lot or Lots so purchased to be immediately put up again and re-sold.

4. The Lots to be taken away at the Buyer's Expense and Risk within twenty-four hours from the conclusion of the Sale, and the remainder of the Purchase-money to be absolutely paid, or otherwise settled for to the satisfaction of the Auctioneer, on or before delivery; in default of which the undersigned will not hold themselves responsible if the lots be lost, stolen, damaged, or destroyed, but they will be left at the sole risk of the Purchaser.

5. While the undersigned will not hold themselves responsible for the correctness of the description, genuineness, or authenticity of, or any fault or defect in, any Lot, and make no Warranty whatever, they will, upon receiving previous to date of Sale trustworthy expert opinion in writing that any Painting or other Work of Art is not what it is represented to be, use every effort on their part to furnish proof to the contrary; failing in which, the object or objects in question will be sold subject to the declaration of the aforesaid expert, he being liable to the Owner or Owners thereof, for damage or injury occasioned thereby.

6. To prevent inaccuracy in delivery, and inconvenience in the settlement of the Purchases, no Lot can, on any account, be removed during the Sale.

7. Upon failure to comply with the above conditions, the money deposited in part payment shall be forfeited; all Lots uncleared within one day from conclusion of Sale shall be re-sold by public or private sale, without further notice, and the deficiency (if any) attending such re-sale shall be made good by the defaulter at this Sale, together with all charges attending the same. This Condition is without prejudice to the right of the Auctioneer to enforce the contract made at this Sale, without such re-sale, if he thinks fit.

8. The undersigned are in no manner connected with the business of the cartage or packing and shipping of purchases, and although they will afford to purchasers every facility for employing careful carriers and packers, they will not hold themselves responsible for the acts and charges of the parties engaged for such services.

STREET SCENE

Water Color

THE motive of this picture is undoubtedly found in the Latin quarter where the narrow streets are thronged with foot passengers and where every manner of Parisian is seen. In the right foreground is a baker's boy carrying a large basket, and beyond him are various types, from the laboring man in blue blouse to the boulevardier in tall hat accompanied by a young lady. Between the high façades on either side of the street is seen at the top of the picture a portion of luminous gray sky.

THE SENTINEL AT THE SULTAN'S TOMB

A CURIOUSLY painted and gilded sarcophagus stands upon a carpeted floor in a mosquelike interior hung with multicolored flags. Richly embroidered and decorated banners on tall shafts surmounted by various gilded devices are ranged around the sarcophagus. In front of it two figures are prostrating themselves, touching their foreheads to the ground. On the right a half-naked pilgrim devoutly kisses the end of one of the banners, and on the left, in the foreground, a sheik, in rich salmon-colored burnous, stands in an attitude of devout attention.

PARIS, September 7th, 1895.
65 Boulevard de Clichy.

DEAR SIR:

I have heard that you have bought my picture "Tidi-Abder-Rhamon's Tomb" and I beg to send you a few lines to explain the subject.

At the death of a holy musulman his fellows in religion build a little monument over the tomb, which is generally ornamented with flags and covered with draperies; these draperies are generally precious, often bearing inscriptions taken out of the Koran and written in the configues types.

The ornamentation of the monument is in carved and painted wood; on the top are little domes.

The musulman women (who they say have no soul) are not allowed to enter the Mosque but are authorized to visit the tombs of the saints, where you very often meet them, specially on certain days. From the decision of a Council at the majority of one, the Christian women are declared to have a soul and are given the right to enter Churches and Temples.

The subject of your picture is: A father with his two children has come to perform his devotion, on the right a Santon (that is, a religious lunatic) kisses a flag. Very often the believer after the prayer and before leaving the church kisses the holy cloth.

Please believe me, Dear Sir,

Truly yours,

Signed: J. L. GÉRÔME.

I forgot to tell that this tomb is situated very near the town of Algiers.

THE CITY OF OPHIR

IN the distance, the golden city, with a multitude of domes, turrets and towers, shimmers in the strong sunlight against a sky partly covered by rapidly drifting kaleidoscopic-colored clouds. From the city gates a multitude of inhabitants pours down to the shores of a broad canal which flows from the right distance out of the picture. In the left of the foreground is a broad quay with a large crowd of people, and floating on the canal nearby are various craft with brilliant-colored sails, all filled with passengers.

THE HARVEST FESTIVAL

In the foreground, floating on a placid stream, is a rowboat gayly decorated for the harvest festival. As a figurehead in the bow is a shock of wheat, with various farming implements, and bearing a stuffed cockerel perched between the tines of a wooden pitchfork. Along the gunwales are fastened garlands of flowers and leaves, and in the stern, under an embroidered canopy, with bunches of flowers on either side, the master, his wife and small child are seated on a couch covered with ripened wheat. Two rowers tug at the oars and four musicians are busily playing. Beyond the boat is a steep, grassy bank, with a large clump of pollard willows, and on the crest of the bank, against the sky, is seen a procession of laborers on their way to the festival. The costumes are all of the late eighteenth century.

THE motive for this picture is evidently taken from the forest of Fontainebleau, for it shows one of the characteristic glades in this famous resort for artists. On either side of an opening, through which a single figure of a peasant woman is walking, is a dense growth of sturdy forest trees. THE BOOKWORM

W. W. Fuller 4000—

A CARDINAL in full red robes, carrying a gold-headed stick, stands near an ornate carved and gilded lectern in a rich library, daintily turning the leaves of a book which rests upon a wrought-iron support. Behind the cardinal, on the right, is a figured velvet screen partly concealing a tapestried curtain.

November 17, 1898.

SIR:

Mr. Allard has told me that you would like to have a letter explanatory of a picture which I have lately finished, and of which you have acquired the ownership.

I hasten to respond to your desire. It will be for me a means of thanking you for the honor you do me in condescending to interest yourself in my work.

The picture in question represents the corner of a picturesque library, which does not shine by reason of any elegance, since its sole ornaments are sombre hangings and old furniture of another period; but upon the shelves where the books are arranged, are hidden many treasures.

Behold, well in evidence, supported by the pulpit of an old lectern, the most precious treasure of all, an old Dutch bible, in its primitive binding, not intact, but at least respectable. It is the latest "find," the rarest piece of all, long coveted, haggled over as to price, finally captured and placed in the sanctuary.

In the absence of the master of the house, a friendly visitor has been introduced. He is a Cardinal who himself would seem to be most appreciative of the marvels of the printers' art, for before taking off his mantle, without even taking the time to put down his stick and hat, he has thrown himself upon the old treasure, and is now slowly turning over the leaves.

The point which I have striven to bring out in this painting is the physiognomy of a bibliophile, at gaze before a rare book. There are many passions in those heads, love or envy; but also that nobility which is always given by erudition joined to taste for art.

There, sir, is the explanation of my character sketch. Besides, since you are yourself an amateur, you must know better than anybody else what he is thinking.

Receive, sir, the assurance of my most perfect consideration.

REMARKABLE ART FANS

This unique and remarkable collection of the work of celebrated artists was started by Mr. Alexander Blumenstiel in 1894, and, after tireless energy, completed in ten years. Each blade is painted by a distinguished artist and is a complete picture in itself, carefully carried out by the artist and strikingly individual in its subject and treatment.

The five fans embrace a complete representation of the work of all the modern foreign and American schools. This work can never again be duplicated. Many of the artists have died—among them, Cazin, Henner, Benjamin Constant, Gérôme, Jacob Maris, Boudin, Vibert, Mesdag, Minor, Vollon—and certainly none of the others would ever accept a similar commission to paint on such a restricted space constituting a work so difficult.

The mountings were designed and executed by Tiffany & Co. Suggestions with respect to the mountings were made by Monsieur Madrazo.

LE PARC DES MOUTONS

A SHEPHERD with two black dogs is driving a large flock of sheep out of an enclosure through a gate into the broad pastures beyond. On the left, in the middle distance, is a large coppice with a single building overshadowed by the trees, and on the right, low in the heavens, the full round disk of the harvest moon is shining, casting a ruddy reflection on the plain below. Through the thin mist which covers the sky a few stars shine here and there.

This picture and the following one, "Early Morning," were purchased at the sale of the effects of the widow of the artist after her death. Mr. D. W. Tryon, the well-known landscape painter, a few weeks before Daubigny's death, which occurred on February 19, 1878, visited his studio and saw these two large pictures on the easels. Mr. Tryon in speaking of his visit says: "Both were noble examples of his work and made a deep impression upon me. I told him they seemed an advance over all his previous pictures. He seemed much pleased and said he hoped as much, adding, 'They are for my family.' I asked if they were not for sale, and he replied: 'They are both too large and too bold to find a purchaser; all my best work remains with me and are pour la famille.'"

THE SHIAWASSEE RIVER

A BROAD, placid river, in which grow water-lilies and river plants in abundance, sweeps from the foreground around to the left and then to the right until it disappears behind a low point crowned with large trees. An irregular rank of rounded trees forms the horizon, and across a low meadow a small area of luminous sky is visible. From this point to the zenith rises a bank of gray clouds.

EARLY MORNING

A PEASANT man and woman, carrying rude haymaking implements, are walking along a sandy road which leads from the right foreground down a gentle declivity to a broad, richly cultivated plain where a stream meanders around between the coppices and meadows, and the spire of a church rises against the horizon in the distance. In the left foreground is a large heap of manure near a thatched farm building which rises out of the picture, and here a number of fowl are seeking their morning meal. A gamecock, joyful at the coming of the dawn, stands crowing lustily on the summit of the heap. The sky is covered with fleecy clouds, the light concentrated near the horizon, where the dawn is breaking, and the morning star shines high in the heavens at the upper left of the composition.

This is a little comedy in a bourgeois household. An indignant old gentleman and his wife have discovered in the drawing-room the képi of a French soldier, and have summoned the servants to explain the mystery. The cook, the housemaid, the butler and the nurse are equally indignant and express by various attitudes and gestures their refutation of the charge.

PEACE AND WAR (blank) 300—

A MEDIAEVAL shepherd taking his ease in the shadow of a small boulder on a grassy slope, surrounded by his flock and attended by his faithful shepherd dog, is startled by the tramp of a horse, and, looking up, sees a knight in full armor mounted upon a sturdy white charger proceeding, lance in hand, along the crest of the hill. Beyond the knight on the left a distant line of hills forms the horizon. The sky is covered with an almost unbroken mass of luminous clouds.

BLUMENSTIEL'S FANS $43,800.

SECOND EVENING'S SALE BRINGS IN $119,000.

A Diaz That Many Bidders Wanted Went at $7,600 and a Corot Went at $7,700 —The Fans That it Took Ten Years to Get Together Sold to a Wine Agent.

The remaining one hundred catalogue lots of the late Alexander Blumenstiel's art collection were sold by Thomas E. Kirby in Mendelssohn Hall last evening for $119,605. They included paintings, drawings and sketches, and a group of five fans.

The paintings which brought the highest prices were a Diaz, "In the Forest," which bidders all over the house wanted and which sold at $7,600 to Scott & Fowles; and a Corot, "Nymphs Bathing," which Andrew Freedman bought for $7,700.

The collection of fans was a fad of Mr. Blumenstiel's. He began it in 1894 and completed it in ten years. Each fan is made up of twenty-one ivory sticks, each stick painted by a different artist, and all mounted on plush, in frames or boxes. The fans sold respectively at $8,800, $6,200, $8,100, $8,100 and $12,600, or a total of $43,800 for the five. They were bought for a widely advertised seller of wine.

Following is a record of the sale in detail, with some omissions of low priced pictures.
